The button-wood trees are there, as of yore, But their limbs are leafless and bare; I glasses, as I plan through the open door, And I mark the winding stair; And the pisce where Minnie was wont to hide In her childish, innocent glee; And I wonder if, where the dead abide, She can ever think of me.

Ah little dream'd, when r careless boy, That those days could ever fly: That Manie, dear, with her smile of jey, Would e'er fold her hands and die:

That how in the churchyard's grassy mold,
They would make for her a bed;
Though I sanctines themed her hair's warm gold
An allow round her head.

But time has softened the grief since theo, And soil has been windcots good; And I wait with each common when I shall join her beyond the flood.

The Man of the Shore.

"But sir, young Maurice could not help saying, "methinks, from your eager looks and anxious questionings, one might almost suppose you had some object in view.

"I have." replied Dacheux, convinced, from all these particulars, that the rightful heirs he had sought for so many years in vain now stood before him, "I have indeed a notion that, about the time you mention, an old man was taken out of the river, on whom a peckle-book was found; and I should not be at all surprised if you were to get back all it contained."

And when I said just my four quar-ters, and I am sure they are substantial enough, they laughed in my face, and Celes-tine cried, and I was like to choke. I appeal to you, Monsieur Dacheux, could a poor fel-to-morrow."

So saying, he left this interesting family, casting behind him a last look, so expressive of satisfaction, that we need not wonder if it laid the foundation for a thousand fond conjectures. None of them, however, came up in the faintest degree to the series of agreeable surprises awaiting them next day at the ands of the most upright and most friendly human beings.

On Maurice's arrival at the cottage of On Maurice's arrival at the cottage of Dacheux, he found there before him the father of his mistress, the same who had laughed to scorn his former pretensions; but who meeting him now with the most cordial frankness, said, "Excuse me, Maurice, for having received somewhat coldly your request for my daughter's hand; but why did you conceal from me that you were worth four-and-twenty thousand francs, and that you were only waiting an opportunity to purchase ware-houses, and set up for your-self?"

"What is all this you are saying?" stam-ered the bewildered Maurice. "I do not

"What is all this you are saying?" stammered the bewildered Maurice. "I do not comprehend a word of it!"

"It shall be explained to you," replied good Dacheux, flying to his deak, and bringing forth the deposit so Bong and so discreetly preserved: "here is your own. If this pocket-book had contained a single name, the least book had contained a single name, the least word of direction to any one, you would have been put in possession of it next day, and your poor grandmother's property have been saved from the haumer. But though long fulled in my researches, it has pleased Heaven to erant me at length the joy of restoring it to its lawful proprietors. It can only belong to those who have so well described it; look to those who have so well described it; look at this black leather, reddened by long use, this old steel clasp, and above all, at the image of St. Maurice. These twenty-four bank bills make the exact sum drawn by your grandfather, and which he was no doubt carrying back to his employers when surprised by treacherous liquor, he fell into the Seine. et this be a lesson, young man, to your-

"Ab, Monsieur Dacheux, there is little fear of my forgetting it. But are you really quite sure this pocket-book was my grand-

"Yes; by the tokens of this silver watch, which was also upon him and the little steel chain, from which still hangs your grandmother's golden heart, and by that of the two fingers of the left hand which were missing from the old man I drew out of the river, and the sear from the tip of the right ear to the chin. How could all these marks meet in any but the right person? Nay, my own heart tells me this restitution is the dictate of Heaven. I am too happy in making it, to be leaven. I am too happy in making it, to be Heaven. I am too happy in making it, to be under any delasion."

So saying, he warmly embraced the delighted young man, whose honest gratitude found vent is the expressions of unsophisticated nature, and whose goodness of heart soon prompted him to make his relatives at home the sharers of his joy. Pauting and breathless, scarce able to speak for delight, he amounced to the two maternal friends of his youth the happy change in their circumstances, and thrust into the shaking hand of his grandmother the well known pocket-book. grandmother the well known pocket-book, saying as he did so, in his turn, "Here is your

"Nay, yours, my children!" exclaimed the patied one, exerting, to transfer it, more strength than she had done for long. "Methinks I feel reviving already, and as though God might yet grant me to see my great grand children.

God might yet grant me to see my great grand children.

The marriage of Maurice with Celestine Aubert took place soon after and joining his father-in-law, whose experience in the cider trade was very extensive, they were soon at the head of that flourishing branch of business. The old grandmother quitted her lodging up five pair of stairs, and came to live with her daughter and the young couple on the Qual de L'Ecole, where the good air sin breathed, and the sight of her children's happiness, so far restored her, that she could sally forth on crutches, to thank in person the luthor of all their prosperity. She and the friends and neighbors by whom she was accompanied, found the indefatigable friend of humanity engased in his vocation, having just rescued from a watery grave as interesting young woman, making, with her unborn infant, the two-hundred and lifteenth life he had been smalled to preserve!

Every one present crowded round the general benefactor, prodisiming him the honor of his country, and a model for makind, and all united in beseeching him to continue while strength permitted, his heroic career, exclaiming, "Never will your memory perish from that of your fellow citizens, or that prondest of litles with which they have thought fit to associate it, when they conferred on you the affecting surname of "The Man of the shore."

THE FEMALE SCALE OF IMPATIENCE.—A village dame was thus heard calling from her cottage door to a child, playing in the distance, and bearing but not heeding her mother: "Limie, luvi Lin-a-buth! E-Lingr-buth! Bees, you young hussy!"

CONVENIENT METHOD OF SERMONISING.—The

One day, Easir Ednin ascended the pulpit of the mosque, and thus addressed the congregation:

"Oh, true believers, do you know what I am going to say to you?"

"No," responded the congregation.

"Well," said he, "there is no use in my speaking to you," and he came down from the pulpit.

He went to preach the second time, and sked the congregation.

asked the congregation—
"Oh, true believers, do you know what I am going to say to you?"
"We know," replied the audience.
"Ah, as you know it," said he, quitting the pulpit, "why should I take the trouble of telling you?"

pulpit, "why should I take the trouble of telling you?"

When next he came to preach, the con-gregation resolved to try his powers, and when he asked his usual question, replied:
"Some of us know, and some of us do not know."

"Very well." said he. "let those who do know tell those who do not know."

A CHILD ADMIRABLY QUALIFIED FOR A LAWYER.—An old lady walked into a law-yer's office, lately, with her boy of seven summers old. "Squire, I called to see if you would like to take this boy, and endeavor to make a lawyer f him."

"Decidedly too young, Madam. Have you

"Decidedly too young, Madam. Have you no older boys?"

"Oh, yes sir, but we mean to make farmers of them. My husband and I thought, however, that this one would make a first rate lawyer, and so I brought him to you."

"Much too young, Madam, to commence the study of a profession. But why do you suppose this boy better calculated to make a lawyer than your older sons? What are his peculiar qualifications?"

"Oh, well, you see, sir, he is just seven years old to-day; when he was only five, he would lie terribly; when he got to be six he was sassy and impudent as any critter could be; and now he will steal everything he can lay his hands upon. Now, if he ain't fit to be a lawyer, I would like to know what he will have to learn." "Pretty well educated, I should think. Too young, however. Good morning, Madam."

COMMERCIAL AFFAIRS.

Monetary and Commercial.

WEDNESDAY EVENING, April 25. For the week ending this evening the monetary demand has been quite active-more so since Monday, however, than for the three days previous. The market has continued easy for good business paper and approved securities, at 10@12 per ent, per annum. The applications for loans in the regular quarters have been about equal to their facilities, but not in advance of them generally. Some money operators speak of having idle capital, but they usually wish to invest it above the regular figures.

Eastern Exchange has been firm, and growing scarce as the week progressed, and yesterday (Tuesday) it advanced with allibut one or two houses to % prem., at which rate the supply is still unequal to the demand; dealers being unwilling in many cases to sell to outsiders, and giving 50%55c, freely, and sometimes even more for Bankers' signatures or prime commercial checks.

Tuesday's Tribune thus speaks of last week's New York Bank Statement: New York Bank Statement:

The Bank statement of weekly averages is looked upon as favorable, the expansion of loans having been checked, while the loss in the specie item is quite moderate in the face of a California receipt near at hand. The contraction of loans is, no doubt, to some extent, involuntary, as some of the banks have been unable to find full simpleyment for their receipts.

The domestic drain of specie has not been large during the week, and the balance of trade with Philadelphia is now in our favor. The deposit line shows a large decline, but not much larger than the centraction of loans and loss of specie would indicate.

The following is a statement of the condi-

The following is a statement of the condi-tion of the Banks of the City of New York:

regard to Monday's financial affairs:

It is now becoming rather desirable that the issual aimser export of apecie should, commence. The United States should—to make their exports balance their imports ship at least $8,000,000 of specie to Europe this year. Thus far—though one-third of the year has nearly clapsed—the total exports have not been over $5,000,000. There was rather more activity in the Exchange market to-day, and lankers were asking 100% for stering 60 day bills, and tilosop 4 for short sight; but even at these rates it equives very nice management to ship specie without netting a loss of the exchange of the short sight; but even at these rates it equives very nice management to ship specie without netting a loss of the exchange of the short states. The leading factors on Paris has advanced his rates of $600,000 and $150,000 at process, and the exchange of the short states double-name space. An advance of one per cent in money seems quite likely, if specie begins to flow outward freely; it would be a healthy indication.

The aggregates of last week's Philadelphia Bank Statement compare with those of the previous week as follows:

per cent. for first-class paper, with a better supply than last week.

The Baltimore Banks are flush and desirous of doing prime names at legal interest, while rates outside rule not above 8 per cent.

Our latest New Orleans lates are to the 22d. Money there was in active demand and rather close for that city, rates ranging at 73/4 @9 for approved paper and securities.
